NATIVITY SCENE AT HOSPITAL

A Yule decoration that gives Christ His rightful place in Christmas and adds beauty to the town is the life-sized Nativity scene in colors on the side of the West Liberty Hospital.

The Nativity scene is on the porch next Court street and is kept lighted at night, the painting being in colors and visible from both Court and Main streets. Arrangement of the scene on the main building and an ell adds to its beauty. The Nativity scene is on the main section of the building and the Shepherds are on the ell. At an angle on the other side of the Nativity are shown the three Wise Men. And on the sun deck above is a life-size Santa and a brilliantly lighted Christmas tree.

THE OLD TIME BLACKSMITH (By J. M. Gevedon)

Most every family that moved into the hills of Kentucky brought its blacksmith with his forge and necessary iron bars and rods for the manufacture of implements to be used by the settlers and I can remember many of these old fellows who made and repaired utensils as long as they were able to work.

Not only can I remember when the smiths shod mules and horses, but I can remember when they made both shoes and nails with which to do the shoeing, from bars of iron for shoes, and small rods for nails, and a man of today would be surprised at how little time it took the old smith to make shoes and nails and shoe the horse—all for twenty-five cents. Covenant Sunday At Methodist Church Is Set For January 3rd

At the Methodist church Sunday, January 3. On that day the people will be asked to sign a card covenanting to attend at least one worship service each Sunday through April 18th—Easter Day.

This is an invitation for all non-church goers in West Liberty and its environs to turn back to the church and to Christ for salvation. Give self to the one who can put joy in the heart.

SALYERSVILLE'S QUINT INVADES MORGAN FRIDAY

Morgan Trounces Two Teams For A 90 Point Margin During Week

The Morgan-Hi Basketball team put things in high gear during the past week as they snowed under two opponents by a prodigious margin of 90 points.

The potentially great Morgan team began their rampage Friday night against Russell, overpowering the visiting Red Devils by a surprising 56 point margin, 79-23. Led by 6-foot-5 center Thornton Hill, 16 points, and guard Paul Lacy, 15 points, the Morgan quint led all the way as they compiled one of the largest margins of victory enjoyed by a local five in some time.

The Morgan crew, obviously had not forgotten their net-singing ways Tuesday night when they traveled to Frenchburg. Although the Menfies countians fought gamely during the first half, the Morgan power began to show during the third period and the Devils pulled away neatly, winning by some 34 points, 75-41. Sid Franklin paced the Morgan attack with a 23-point scoring spree.

The Morgan team will endeavor to prove its strength when they take on Salyersville and Meade Memorial Friday and Saturday nights respectively of this week. One of the hottest rivalries in this area will be on hand when Salyersville's Hornets travel to the Morgan county seat Friday night in an effort to stop the high-flying Blue Devils. The Devils will motor to Meade Memorial Saturday night as they attempt to upset the clay Red Devils who at present are rated fourth in the state. Coaches Stanley and Anderson agree that it would be a very Merry Christmas if the Devils should add these contests to their growing victory column.

Making of Christmas Decorations Explained At Garden Club Meet

Prof. H. C. Haggan of Morehead State College demonstrated the making of Christmas decorations at the December meeting of the West Liberty Garden Club held in the dining room of the Christian Church last Friday evening.

The program followed a covered dish dinner for the 45 who attended. Mrs. J. Blaine Nickell and Mrs. Roy Nickell were co-hostesses. Members brought their families for this meeting.

Holly, pine and greenery for making the Christmas decorations were provided by members and Prof. Haggan showed and demonstrated the making of many attractive decorations for the Yule season.

SEWAGE PLANT PLANS COST $4165

Engineering plans for a modern sewage system and disposal plant which West Liberty had prepared in 1947, were obtained through the Community Facilities Service of the U. S. Public Works Administration Planning Department under a grant of $4,165.

The grant does not bear interest but is to be repaid at face value only if the city builds such a system, according to the city's contract with the Federal Government.

Some residents are under the impression the grant of $4,165 is drawing interest, but this is not so, according to Mayor Ora McClain and Police Judge John Helton who cited the Stanley Public Works Planning Program of the Federal Government as enacted by Congress in 1946 and the city's copy of the contract.

The engineering plans are still available for use by the city and will cost only $4,165 if used, the city officials said.

The city council decided at a recent meeting to conduct a referendum sometime soon to determine if the citizens of the town want to have a sewer system and disposal plant built here. No time has been set for the voting.

Morgan People Lived Well In 1879

Self-Sufficiency Was Mark of Morgan People In The Early Days

By Edward C. O'Rear

Turning back the pages for say two generations, and recalling the persons of those times and places in the history of Morgan county, is a record for a just pride. In the year 1879 Rutherford B. Hayes was president of the United States, and James B. McCreary was Governor of Kentucky—before this age of electricity and gasoline. It was an era of peace and plenty. While conditions of life then might seem hard and meager as compared with the opulent present, our people were industriously employed and lived well.

In that year there was published "The Kentucky Gazette and Business Directory." In it was listed the towns and villages of the State, with the names of "all persons doing business therein." In Morgan county the following appear:

West Liberty, population 200, 35 miles east of Cornwell on the Mt. Sterling division of the L. C. & L. R. R. (The terminus of the now known C. & O. then was Mt. Sterling). The town was served with a daily mail (when weather and roads permitted). J. H. Cole was postmaster. The business directory recites:

W. M. & W. C. Kendall, grocers. G. W. Phillips, blacksmith. Wm. Ward, hotel (jailer). Thornley & Waldeck, physicians.

4-H'er GROWS CORN

Joe Grant Neal, Johnson county, state 4-H club champion corn grower, has averaged almost 125 bushels an acre for eight years. His highest yield was 147 bushels in 1949. His success is due largely to the right combination of fertile land, fertilizer and hybrid corn. Also, of course, he always had sufficient moisture, or just about enough.

Considerable acreages of Balboa rye were seeded in Bullitt county for early spring pasture.

THE LOCAL PAPER LEADS

In the comparatively recent past, the local newspaper was about the only place where merchants could advertise their wares. Since then, other important media have come into existence—notably the radio and television. But, despite the inroads these have made on retailers' advertising budgets, the newspaper is still the dominant factor in the field by a wide margin. That statement is substantiated by a recent survey of the advertising practices of department stores in all sections of the country. It found that the typical store allocated 80 percent of the advertising dollar to newspapers, nine percent to television, four percent to radio, three percent to direct mail, and four percent to other media. The local newspaper offers the surest means of reaching the masses of the people—whether with a news story or an editorial opinion or an advertising message. And that's why merchants place it first when dividing up their advertising appropriations.

Incidentally, one wonders if there are still people who regard advertising as a waste which adds unnecessarily to the cost of goods. Actually advertising acts as a possible factor in holding prices down by creating the widest possible demand for merchandise, and thus making mass production and mass distribution possible.

THE GREATEST GIFT

Christmas can be many things. It can be fat flakes of snow spreading a white woolen blanket over the earth's faded patchwork quilt. It can be a lighted candle that mellows the bleakness of a winter's night. It can be a decorated tree that makes a room warm and alive. It can be gifts.

These things are traditional and in a time when tradition is uprooted to make way for atomic plant, power dams and super highways, it gives a sense of security to have a Christmas replete with snow, a beautiful Christmas tree and gifts.

Custom becomes nostalgia when it takes us back in years, usually to a farm home beside a country road, where a tree strung with popcorn, berries and festoons of paper cutouts is the most beautiful tree in the world. The gifts are few: a knife each for the boys; for the girls, dolls and ribbons; for all, stick candy and maybe some precious fruit. The gifts are few, but the joy is great. The knife is treasured all year and sometimes a lifetime; the doll is loved even more as the years go by.

Cherish those years—when tradition was just that, tradition. Today, we have allowed tradition to become a burden. The gift tradition stabs Christmas in the back when it becomes a father quarreling at a mother who spends for a child who is ungrateful. Sometimes our greatest holiday gets lost in a tradition that loses touch with the past.

If we awaken Christmas morning and find that snow has gift-wrapped the earth; if we see a gaily decorated tree; if we have gifts—let us be thankful.

If, however, we awaken to an earth in an everyday dress, and if our tree remains in the forest and our expected gifts have not materialized—let us do away with pettiness, and replace fault-finding with an inner radiance that glows and sings, because it is Christmas. Having Christmas is the greatest gift of all.

FARMERS IN A SQUEEZE

To what extent, if any, is the American farmer's situation in 1953 really worse than it was in 1950, 1951, and 1952?

Probably the clearest answer to this question is given in a diagram published in the New York Times covering the period from June 1950 to October 1953. "Prices received" by farmers nosedived from 280 points to 260 this year. Yet "prices paid" by farmers hugged the 280-yard line closely all year long. (Note this was a drop of 20 points, based on 1910-14 prices as 100, not per cent of January 1953 prices.)

Everywhere, too, farmers are demanding that something be done to reduce the excessive costs of distribution. The farmer's share of the consumer's dollar which reached 54 cents during the war is now reported at 44 cents. The USDA should investigate fully.

THE ROMANCE OF TOBACCO

The people in Morgan county are largely agricultural. In the central and northern part of Kentucky the wealth, influence and population are largely centered in the towns and cities. In the counties on the headwaters of the Big Sandy and the Kentucky Rivers the wealth and people are in mining towns and the county seats and agriculture is of small concern. Not so in Morgan. Here the farmers form the larger part of the population and are a very substantial factor not only in the county but in the whole commonwealth. Whatever relates to the soil is of much interest and importance in the daily life of every one in the county.

When the English came to Virginia they found the Indians using tobacco. In 1492 when Columbus and his sailors landed they found the Indians smoking what appeared to them firebrands and puffing smoke from their mouth and nostrils. They discovered that they were smoking dried leaves from a plant that grew in the West Indies and on the mainland.

To the Indian the pipe was an emblem of hospitality and good will. The Red Man sprinkled tobacco powder on his nets to catch more fish. When the Indians made a treaty or carried on important business, they smoked a pipe and passed it from hand to hand as a seal of confirmation.

The early explorers learned to smoke and when they returned to Europe they started its use in their home countries.

The first settlers in Virginia grew rich from tobacco. It soon became the recognized currency of the colony and values were set by the price of tobacco. The first law relating to the grade of tobacco was made in 1619 at the first legislative assembly ever to meet in America. In 1620 Virginia produced 55,000 pounds which sold for $54.75 per hundred pounds. Because of the price the supply outran the demand and in 1790 the price was $34.00 per hundred pounds. The colonists tried to check this downward course in price and to avert a depression. At one time they agreed to raise no crop for one year but this failed to work. They next tried to limit by statute, not the acres but the number of plants for each farmer. This was termed a "cut out" and a restriction on acreage was called a "stint."

But neither seemed to work at that time. In 1682 Virginia tried to get a "cut out" for one year, but failed to pass the law. Then some of the dissatisfied people cut up the plants of many crops and finally three men were hanged. Similar outbreaks occurred in Maryland and other places.

From 1790 to 1840 tobacco remained a staple commodity and about the same amount was produced each year. The tobacco industry in Kentucky began in 1784 when Gen. James Wilkinson took a cargo of tobacco down the Ohio and Mississippi to New Orleans and sold it to the Spanish for $35.00.

In 1920 Kentucky produced 475,000,000 pounds on 550,000 acres which was one-third of all produced in the United States.

Today the production, handling, manufacturing and exporting tobacco is one of Kentucky's chief industries and brings the largest cash income to many farmers in Kentucky and in this county. We hope to bring you in another article the chief story of tobacco in Kentucky and followed by the story of it in Morgan county.

SPARKLE AND LUSTER

Sparkle and luster and gay decorations add to the cheer of Yule-time. And the brilliant lighting of West Liberty's Main street by the Woman's Club, business and others is a point of civic pride.

Sixteen hundred feet of electric cable containing 200 vari-colored bulbs have been stretched from one side of the street to the other to add to the cheer of the Yuletide season. In addition, the Christmas tree on the public square has been brilliantly lighted, and together these decorations add greatly to the town's appearance at this season, one that might well be continued year after year.

The annual Christmas tree lighting program will be staged at the tree on the public square Saturday evening of this week. It is a program that all should attend and witness.

The Woman's Club and all who aided in decorating of the town at Christmas time are to be commended.

NO—NOT MAIL-ORDER GOVERNMENT!

(From Floyd County Times)

The White House is undergoing a light bombardment of messages, by mail and wire, from followers of Senator McCarthy. These messages are, in effect, asking President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles to scrap their foreign policy and to adopt one more to the liking of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Without arguing the merits of either policy—although we admit we are more satisfied with the plan of mutual respect and cooperation advocated by the President and Dulles than we are with McCarthy's plan to "crack down" on those nations which decline to behave always as we would have them—we ask:

Is ours to become a government by mail order and Western Union, or are its policies to be decided upon after cool appraisal of the world situation and adhered to, regardless of pressure?

If a change of policy, on which the safety and preservation of the nation obviously hinge, is to be dedicated by long-distance demand, more than one school of thought should be called upon to express its voice in the matter. Certainly the appearance of one man on television with an appeal to the emotions should not suffice to state a case so momentous in the lives of all of us.

If you can see some good in everybody, everybody will see some good in you.

Life is so short, but there is always time for Courtesy.

Plows, hoes, mattocks, shovels, chains, wedges, sheep and cow bells, pot hooks, butche-knives, table knives, rifle guns, andirons, corn-knives, spindles for wheels, bullet moulds, forceps, flax hammers, bridge bits, hammers and many implements were made by the smiths of former times. I can well remember when but few tools and other items of hardware were brought in for sale.

Benjamin Long made the finest sheep and cow bells. I cannot remember Uncle Ben, but when a boy I could stand on the hills and hear dozens of bells, worn by cattle and sheep that were out on the range, and father told me that his Uncle Ben had made most of all these bells. Father and mother had many useful implements that Uncle Ben had made for them, and I can remember when father bought his first "brought-hoe."

Somewhere on the old farm lie buried two old mattocks made by Old Uncle Sam Cecil for my father and grandfather. I can remember Mr. Cecil, but was never at his shop.

The first rifle gun I ever carried was made by George Chaney, who was known as an expert gun maker as well as a fine smith. I was almost grown when the first guns and pistols using cartridges came into this section.

I have been told that Marshall Moore made a lock for our first jail. I do not vouch for this statement, but I have used guns of his make, and they were good ones.

In my younger days, most all wagons were made by the local smiths. I remember when the first wagons were bought on the market.

When a small boy, we sent and received our mail at Hazel Green, and did our trading with J. Taylor Day, our nearest dealer in general merchandise, including some implements of hardware, as well as gun barrels and locks, pistols and muzzle loading shot guns.

I was never in the town of West Liberty till large enough to go to mill there.

Morgan's golden leaves of barley are long in the long grass. And observers now predict the total cash income from this year's crop will go above last year's.

G. I. LEAVE BONDS

The Treasury Department has advised that thousands of WW II veterans still have not cashed in more than $51 million in terminal leave bonds. The last series of these bonds matured on October 1, 1951, five years after they were issued.

The bonds no longer earn interest and the veteran should be advised that rather than continue to hold the bonds they should re-invest in U.S. Savings Bonds, which would earn appreciable interest.

DR. ADOLPHUS GILLIAM

THE HILLS OF TIME

Not many years ago I had the privilege of seeing a movie "I'd Climb The Highest Mountain." I liked the movie very much; it was written by a minister's daughter; really it was a portrayal of her father's life and it was rather good. Since I was a boy studying geography I have been intrigued by the mountains as they were pictured on the face of the earth; I always wanted to see them. I was reared in the hills but I knew nothing about mountains. It was my dream that some day I would climb Pike's Peak and look from the top of it. I shall never forget the afternoon I was driving towards the Rockies with some friends when those mountains began to tower way up in the sky above us. We drove and drove and drove and they kept towering like the giant foundations of the earth in front of us. It was my privilege the next morning to drive up Pike's Peak; finally when I landed on top of that peak I looked everywhere in every direction and then thanked God and only asked him if He would let me get back down safely. Really it did challenge me.

I would like to give you a poem that was written by a very familiar person, Helen Welshimer.

HILLS

I do not fear the highest hill, dear Father,
The one that stands so dark against the sky.
Some strength will come when it is mine for climbing.

A post of clouds or fire to guide me by.
But, oh, the little hills are hard to conquer.
The ones that march before me day by day
In monotone whose rhythm is unbroken—
So like they, those hillocks on my way.
I think I could climb Sinai without falling,
Or walk where fields are green and waters still!

But if the sum of little tasks and duties
That seem so useless supplement Thy will,
Then I shall ask that I may never falter,
But walk the lower ways that I have trod,
Believing each is worthy of the courage
I did not need to take my high hill, God.

The hills of time are those upheavals along the journey that we travel that come to us almost day by day and certainly at very short intervals in life. They are those things that we must overcome, we must cross. They come at times when least expected and they are just the thing that life challenges us with. Really I think that this poem has something in it because the inference is that the thing that counts most and is perhaps the hardest to do is the monotonous thing, the things that come so often, because most of us when we gird ourselves are equal to the higher hills or the higher mountains. It is the little things that get us down. I remember a story told me by a friend who had been abroad; one day he walked into a large building, at the other end of which was a monument, something rather beautiful. Coming closer to it he discovered that it was made of multitudes of dazzling stones; they had been stuck in the surface of this monument and were from different countries all over the world. All of that magnificent beauty was made up of just little stones, placed there one at a time by people traveling along that way.

Everything is not sparkling and everything that comes along is not dazzling. Sometimes it is the other things that come, the little sting, the little hurt, the little forgotten word that ought to have been said that finally piles up into a hill in the journey of life. Now and then someone sits down in front of the counselor and begins to tell in their own way of the many little problems that they have had, the hills that they have had to cross. Some of them they felt like they could not make because they looked so towering to them and they felt that by the time they had crossed over them they would have to begin climbing another one. Many of the people in this day and age who are defeated are defeated just like that, not by climbing the high places nor doing the most difficult tasks; they are really defeated in the grind of the small hills they cross. Shall I say to you who are climbing the mountain and the plane that graduates to a higher plane of rearing a family that everyone of us who has had this opportunity knows that it is a great task. Every day something is challenging us. Mother is wearing her life out doing the extra things that come up, to take care of the increasing demands of the little fellows that are looking to them, and day by day she is worn almost to a point of surrender by those things. Every now and then somebody tells me that they are going to quit school, and they are very young. Not long ago someone sat down in my office (sixteen years of age) and said, "I just do not like to go to school. I am going to quit." When asked what he was going to do about it and what the future would hold, he said, "I am going to make my way with my hands. I do not want to learn anything to have to use my mind." He had just given up. Why he had done it was a lot of the story, I am sure, but that is what he had done. In this job of making good I have a good deal of feeling for the young couple who are just starting in life, who begin with nothing and work up; professional men who have paid a lot of time and money to gain a profession may start out doing it. Not many years ago I sat down with one of my very close friends who was doing that; he was one of those who could take it. He had taken it so far because he had worked his way through school and he told me that he had lived on $.75 a week time after time. He did not have any more than that to buy food but just had to make it go. You admire very much the courage of anyone who will do that but I am going to say to you, as Miss Welshimer has said, if you will climb these hills and overcome and go down what ever the valley may have and start again and not let this monotony wear you down as you grow older you need not worry about the mountains; they are going to look small to you and you are going to be really ready to climb them.

What I want to say to you is this; I do not know what is ahead of us, I know we can only live one day at a time and climb one hill or mountain at a time; it is not necessary to take two at once, but they are coming in spite of all we can do. God knows that we are climbing these hills, crossing these valleys, and sometimes we have to climb the rugged steep of the high mountain; He has said to us, "My grace is sufficient and I will never leave nor forsake you." "If you will keep your face set in the direction of the highest goal of man I promise you that life nor death, principalities nor powers, things present nor things to come shall be able to separate you from my love and devotion in Him who climbed the towering mountain of Golgotha and made His way through the corridor of death and came out on the other side victorious." He is the One who sticks with us in all of these things. Let me commend to you the Eternal God and wish that you may be able to climb all these hills and the mountains to reach the goal of your desire.

Students and Pre-School Tots Greet Health Officers For Immunizations

By Bernard E. Whitt

It has been widely said that the health of a nation is more important than the wealth of a nation. One of the most important divisions of state government is the Department of Health of Kentucky. Through the department each county has an opportunity to organize and maintain a county health unit, composed of health officer, a nurse, clerk and a sanitarian. The cost to the county is very small as the State pays most of the cost. For many years Morgan county has had a health unit.

Part of the time they had a doctor and a clerk and part time a nurse. At present the staff consists of a registered nurse, clerk, and a sanitarian.

Most people know about the county health program and are anxious to take advantage of the services available.

I have traveled with the Sheriff, Soil Conservation, PMA chairman, County Agent and other agencies in their field work and have been impressed with the way they met the people and did their work. I had never traveled with any of the health officers until last Thursday morning. The nurse, Mrs. Della Kinney, the county sanitarian, Walter Blevins, and Mrs. Helen Black, clerk, and myself left West Liberty at 9 a.m. and arrived at the Upper Pleasant Run school about 9:30. We found Miss Mildred Wilbur, the teacher, who is a college graduate and a missionary from New York state and has been teaching at the school for three years doing an outstanding job.

There were about twenty-five children, all neat, clean, happy and getting along nicely. They have made their school room clean and decorated it with the American flag, pictures, school furniture, nice board, curtains and a comfortable room.

I thought of the difference when I visited the school about six years ago, no windows, no door, no pictures, no board and really nothing but bare walls.

Mrs. Kinney met the children smiling, and Mrs. Black called off the names. They came up and were given immunization for typhoid, tetanus, etc. The children smiled, laughed and took it all good natured. I noticed a runner was sent to a home and some small children were brought for their immunization.

On our way back from the school at U. Pleasant Run Mrs. Kinney and Mrs. Black stopped at the home of Mr. Smith and gave immunization to some pre-school children on the request of the teacher and parents.

We then went to the Fannin school where Mrs. Elsie Motley is teaching and only a few of the children there were to complete their immunization but the teacher told us to stop at a nearby home where two or three mothers were waiting with their pre-school children for immunization. One of the mothers and her children came back with us in the car to her home near Dehart.

Our next visit was to the Mus-sel Shoals school where Avonell Honn is teaching. We arrived and saw two cars parked which had brought some mothers and children to the school for their immunizations.

One or two of the small children cried some, and I noticed that the mother of one boy about four or five who hesitated to take the shot, took him across her lap and gave the necessary help. He left the room without much crying after it was over.

We visited the Ditony Ridge school where Eugene Manning is teaching. He had a nice group of children and a good building. They have recently concreted their well and fixed the pump. Most of the children here were immunized, some of them also for smallpox. As the teacher would call their names they went up the nurse without any complaint and most of them smiled a little.

There were some pre-school children and one man brought two families in his car for the small children to take their shots.

Two or three things that impressed me most was the fine attitude of the children and parents and their cooperation with the health unit. They understand how important it is and how that preventative measure may save their children from typhoid, diphtheria, tetanus and smallpox or even save the lives of children.

It is so different to what it was when the health program began when I was superintendent of schools. Then if the children knew that the health doctor or nurse was coming to school, they would stay away. Now they bring the children too young to go to school and those who are in school are anxious to be in school when the nurse comes.

Another phase of the health program is the sanitation and water supply. Schools have come to the place where they do not use the water unless it has been tested to see if it is pure.

Records are kept by the health officer and when the staff visits schools they know just what children have been immunized and when and do not have to repeat something that is unnecessary.

Health education and immunization and the things being done by the county and state boards of health is not only of tremendous importance to the lives and health of our citizens but is a great saving to the people financially in doctor bills.

GROWS 3450 LBS. ON 8-TENTHS ACRE

SANDY HOOK, Ky., Dec. 15—An Elliott county farmer, it is believed has set a State record for burley tobacco production this year.

Glenn Ison of Stevens harvested 3,450 pounds from 8-tenths of an acre. And the ground on which Ison produced the burley was spot-checked last Friday by an inspector from the State PMA office to be sure he did not use more ground than his allotted base.

A production of 3,450 pounds on 8-tenths of an acre far exceeds any previous record set in Kentucky, PMA officials say.

But, they point out, there is a reason for Ison's high production. He not only set his tobacco in rows only 18 inches apart, but he also "strip-cropped" the patch.

PMA men explain it this way. Ison set out three rows, then skipped 12 feet and set out three more rows, etc. The 12-foot plots between his tobacco were sowed to Korean lespedza, thus allowing plenty of sunshine to get to the tobacco even though it was planted in rows only 18 inches apart.

Ison sold the crop to a "pin-hooker" for $55 a hundredweight, and it has been reported the crop brought above $61 on the market.

Co. Court Clerks Have New Tags

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 14—Kentucky automobile license tags for 1954 have been shipped to county court clerks and will soon be on sale in all counties. The plates are white with blue numerals and retain the slogan "Tour Kentucky" from previous tags.

State law provides that new plates may not be displayed on vehicles before Dec. 29. Passenger and farm truck licenses expire Dec. 31, but may be used until midnight March 1, 1954.

Dealer tags expire Dec. 31 and new tags must be displayed Jan. 1.

WAGE INCREASE ALLOWED

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 14—The Kentucky Court of Appeals disposed of a four-year old wage order of the Department of Industrial Relations by allowing a 50 percent increase in minimum wages for non-service and service employees in hotels and restaurants. It modified a Franklin Circuit Court order which upheld larger increases.

The Department of Industrial Relations recommended raising of the minimum wage figure from 30 to 60 cents an hour for non-service employees, in the larger centers. The Appellate Court held the evidence did not justify doubling the wage floor, but permitted it to stand at the midway mark. The higher figure applied to the first zone, including larger population centers, but fixed slightly lower figures for the second and third zones.

Progressive Homemakers Enjoy Christmas Party

The glory of the Yuletide season was reflected in the annual party of the Progressive Homemakers held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Ingram Thursday evening, December 10.

The rooms were decorated in evergreens and holiday colors. A glittering Christmas tree stood in the lovely dining room surrounded by beautifully wrapped packages.

Games were dictated by Mrs. Curt Jackson, recreation leader, assisted by Mrs. John Rose and Mrs. Herbert Murphy. A comic skit was given by Mrs. Ray Cox, Mrs. J. B. Murphy and Mrs. Marion Rowland. Mrs. Murphy was charming in her red majorette costume twirling a rolling-pin baton, as she led the kitchen band in the parade through the rooms.

Gifts were exchanged by the women, and joke gifts were given the men. Gifts also were contributed by the members to fill a Christmas box for a needy family.

Candies, cake, coffee and hot chocolate were served to the following: Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Murphy and Jerry, Mr. and Mrs. Elie McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mays, Mrs. Martha Motley, Mrs. Joe Motley and Kathy Jo, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rose, Mr. and Mrs. John Rose, Mr. and Mrs. D. KENTUCKY'S LOW TRUCK LIMITS IMPEDE AMERICA'S PRIMARY TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM

WHY ARE KENTUCKY TRUCK LIMITS THE LOWEST IN THE NATION?

Kentucky can't be expected to "do things in a big way" as long as her transportation arteries are throttled by truck limits that are lower than any other state in the Nation! As long as Kentucky continues to impose these discriminatory limitations, her Agriculture, Commerce and Industry will continue to suffer. Let's remove this transportation handicap and let Kentucky compete on a basis that is at least equal to the national average.

Arkansas Travelers Girl Team To Play In West Liberty Dec. 24th

The Arkansas Travelers Basketball team, under the leadership of the Nation's premier woman performer, All-American Hazel Walker will be on display when the touring girls' team meets the West Liberty Independents Thursday night, Dec. 24 at 7 o'clock at the high school gym in West Liberty.

Without question, the Hazel Walker combine rates as the No. 1 Women's Basketball Team in the Nation. Proof of that claim is the amazing record the team has compiled against man's teams only in its four-year history.

The 1952-53 season was the biggest and best yet for the Arkansas Travelers who played a 200-game schedule in 48 states. The girls parlayed amazing finesse, entertainment and beauty to the acclaim of thousands of basketball fans.

In addition, sports writers everywhere have tabbed the team

"The Nation's Most Watchable Basketball Outfit." The Travelers produce basketball at its best and entertainment at its finest—appealing to the kids who have only a nodding acquaintance with the game to long-time fans of the sport.

The club thrives on expert basketball but mixes just enough shennigans and trickery to round out an entertaining night on the boards. Hazel Walker personally puts on a Free Throw exhibition during half time—challenging all comers, man or woman, shooting standing-kneeling or sitting—has never been beaten the past seven years. From Miss Walker's amazing exhibition of shooting from the free-throw line—she's the world champion in this department—to trick shots scored from a mass of baffling pass patterns, the Arkansas Travelers produce the best brand of basketball on display anywhere.

At that time another post office was maintained at Bangor, at the mouth of North Fork of Licking River, 10 miles from West Liberty. The postmaster was J. J. Cassidy and mail was received four times a week. Mr. Cassidy also operated a grist mill there, and he and his family were the only residents of what had once been a thriving business center.

The location of an extensive lumber mill and store operated by the Licking River Lumber & Mining Co. But that company had removed its plants to Butler, down on the Licking near Covington. Mr. J. J. Cassidy was the father of S. S. Cassidy, a newspaper man connected later with the Mt. Sterling Sentinel.

Such appears to be the roster of the "business men" of the county, located in the villages and towns of the county. It will be noted nearly all of them were makers of things, all employed in homely, small productions, catering to the needs, rather than superfluous, prideful things.

It happens I came to know nearly every one of those men. They were men of stamina, whose lives well reflected the general character of the county people, sturdy, useful, sober, upright.

The county produced most of its needed articles, instead of importing them from other producing centers—a sound economy for a county, a nation or an individual. Those times were not really hard times; they were good times made such by good people.
